ISSUES RAISED

2.6 - Health and Safety Unsafe behaviour

DESCRIPTION OF THE ADVERTISEMENT

This television advertisement – one of a series - shows a HTH tradesman wearing safety gear, using a drop saw to cut his bread roll in two. He states, “at Home, we are putting the hard back into hardware.”

THE COMPLAINT

A sample of comments which the complainant/s made regarding this advertisement included the following:

This ad is insulting to all tradesmen who take pride in their profession and work to strict Work-safe and OH&S standards and practices.

A dropsaw is a very dangerous appliance which HT&H sell to the general public and the advertisement is an entirely inappropriate use of such a tool. It should not be seen or portrayed as a joking matter to appeal to the would-be handyman that a dropsaw is a new fun gadget, or something they can cut up other foods or materials not designed for the machine etc. The actor performing the ad would not have agreed to do this stunt if he was an experienced and respectful tradesman in my opinion. My dad was a carpenter all his life and almost lost his arm with his Black and Decker circular saw. His friend was not so lucky; he cut off his own leg in a terrible accident with his circular saw.

I am an industrial designer with considerable experience designing products and appliances and I am shocked at the gross irresponsibility of HT&H.

To provide some context, this TVC falls within Home Timber and Hardware's (HTH) wider creative platform of 'Put the Hard Back into Hardware'. This platform, introduced in 2015 through a series of brand TVCs and supporting collateral, stemmed from an insight that hardware retailers had watered down their offerings to accommodate smaller, more home improvement based tasks. 'Put the Hard Back into Hardware' seeks to reinstate the traditional hardware store in the minds of Home Timber and Hardware customers, reminding them of their ability to embrace proper, larger scale jobs. In this context, this commercial introduces a HTH representative to identify examples where Tradespeople have shopped at a competitor store and have consequently turned "soft". His task is to toughen them up in the context of shopping at a HTH store. The commercial is clearly filmed in a light hearted manner utilising typical Tradesperson humour.

As a leading supplier of materials to the building industry we are committed to following industry standards on health and safety and can confirm the following:

- The tradesman is wearing all required safety gear including ear muffs, safety glasses and hard hat.*
- The drop saw was securely mounted to the workbench.*
- The tradesman is watching what he is doing and only looks up to the camera before and after he uses the drop saw.*
- A dedicated Safety Officer was present at all times during the shoot and supervised the scene where the Tradesman is using power tools.*
- Whilst the point is made in a lighthearted manner it is not at the expense of safety.*

Home Timber & Hardware Group is committed to complying with the AANA Advertiser Code and all applicable laws with respect to its advertising activities. In addition, HTH Group would like to assure the Board that it is, and will continue to be, careful to ensure that all advertising that refers to it or any of its brands is not offensive and does not promote conduct of an irresponsible nature.

THE DETERMINATION

The Advertising Standards Board ("Board") considered whether this advertisement breaches Section 2 of the Advertiser Code of Ethics (the "Code").

The Board noted the complainant's concerns that the advertisement depicts a man cutting his salad roll with a drop saw which is an inappropriate use of a dangerous tool and is contrary to prevailing community standards on health and safety.

The Board viewed the advertisement and noted the advertiser's response.

The Board considered Section 2.6 of the Code. Section 2.6 of the Code states: "Advertising or Marketing Communications shall not depict material contrary to Prevailing Community Standards on health and safety”.

The Board noted that this television advertisement opens on a tradie using a drop saw to cut his sandwich in half while he says, “At Home, we’re putting the hard back into hardware”.

The Board noted the advertiser’s response that in the advertisement, the tradesman is wearing all required safety gear including ear muffs, safety glasses and hard hat; the drop saw was securely mounted to the workbench; the tradesman is watching what he is doing and only looks up to the camera before and after he uses the drop saw; and a dedicated Safety Officer was present at all times during the shoot and supervised the scene where the Tradesman is using power tools.

A minority of the Board noted the overall tone of the advertisement and considered it was light-hearted and the man’s actions in cutting his sandwich using a drop saw were not intended to be serious or to be copied by viewers. A minority of the Board noted that the man does glance down as he is cutting his sandwich and considered that the overall impression is that this man is comfortable using this tool and is doing so in a safe manner.

Following considerable discussion however, the majority of the Board noted that the man only glances down at the drop saw after he has used it and considered that it is not made clear in the advertisement that the man has set up the machine in-line with the relevant safe use of this machine and in their view the man’s glance is not sufficient to suggest that current health and safety practice around the use of a drop saw is being followed. The majority of the Board noted the humorous tone of the advertisement and considered that the fast-paced nature of the scenes was indicative of no consideration of care or safety. Overall the majority of the Board considered that the potential consequences for a person using machinery in this manner outweighs the intended humour and light-hearted nature of the advertisement and that it is a depiction condoning behaviour that is unsafe.

The Board considered that the advertisement did depict material contrary to Prevailing Community Standards.

The Board determined that the advertisement did breach Section 2.6 of the Code.

Finding that the advertisement did breach Section 2.6 of the Code, the Board upheld the complaint.

THE ADVERTISER'S RESPONSE TO DETERMINATION

I can confirm that the advertisement referred to in this complaint will be modified. It is not currently on air.
